

Time to End Ethanol Subsidies & Tariff

Across the country, support is plummeting for ethanol tax credits and trade protection. Recent editorials by leading newspapers make the case for opening America's renewable fuels market to real competition that will benefit consumers.

The Washington Post

“ At this point, the question should not be whether to allow corn ethanol's tax incentives and trade protections to expire. The debate should be about why corn ethanol deserves any federal protection at all. ”

July 24, 2010

Chicago Tribune

“ It's time to eliminate the tax credit. And before Congress even considers mixing more biofuel..., it needs to lift the protectionist barriers so ethanol brewed from foreign sugar can compete. ”

July 24, 2010

WALL STREET JOURNAL

“ The best refutation of the theory of the survival of the fittest is probably the corn ethanol lobby, whose annual $6 billion in federal subsidies have managed to outlive both its record of failure and all evidence and argument. ”

July 26, 2010

The New York Times

“ Congress should end tax breaks for corn ethanol.... There are many more useful ways to spend taxpayer dollars. ”

July 29, 2010

Nearly 40 papers have called for reform of U.S. ethanol policy. See what they're saying in your district:
SweeterAlternative.com/editorials

